

'A City Upon a Hill'

The Pilgrim Fathers and
America's English Puritan Legacy

An online course of five two-hour classes by Ronnie Hanna, BA, MA

'A City Upon a Hill'

In November 1620, 400 years ago, a small vessel anchored in Cape Cod Bay in the area designated as New England. On board the Mayflower were 102 English men and women, many of them Puritan separatists, who would establish a new colony in this part of North America, and in the next two decades many more would follow them. This is the opening page of modern America's story of national origin and the foundation of that country's Puritan legacy. The Puritans set out to establish what one of their number, John Winthrop, called 'a city upon a hill' – an example to the rest of the world and, for many, a beacon of hope. They did not fail.
